Bullying and the ability to rise above it are at the heart of this strikingly beautiful picture book. All school-aged children have either bullied, been bullied, or witnessed bullying, and all too often, they feel powerless to stop what has been set in motion. Such is not the case with Eliza. Her mother has given her “ wings to fly ” and the ability to see all the possibilities that lie before her. So, when bullies pick on the new student, Lainey, gradually robbing her of her smile and ability to paint beautiful pictures, Eliza wants to help, and she does, by finding a way to show Lainey all that she can be. Then in the schoolyard, Eliza stands up to the bullies. One by one, the other children add their voices, and soon the bullies have skulked away. Lyrical and eloquent yet realistic and down to earth, Nan Forler ' s text is complemented beautifully with François Thisdale ' s haunting images. This is a book for every child, every classroom, and every library.

Elmer, the patchwork elephant, has been a favorite of children around the world for decades. When Elmer realizes that the birds are being frightened by the big bully bird, he comes up with an ingenious solution which will rid them of the nasty bully for good!

Bluejays are pretty rude birds. In fact, they can be downright mean. This was especially true of Bully Bully Blue Jay. He pecked at other birds, but deep down he just wanted someone to love him. And finally, a teacher did. In this lavishly illustrated book by a veteran early childhood educator, children learn from a bully of a bird how love from a friend can help you make a fresh start. filled with photos of the children in the author's classroom, and illustrations of the bully bird, the lessons children learn from this story include how not to hurt anyone on the inside or the outside.

"Like nothing you have seen before," raves Kirkus Reviews in a starred review. In his most beautiful and moving work to date, Bob Staake explores the universal themes of loneliness, bullying, and the importance of friendship. Every child feels different in some way, but Thuy feels "double different." She is Vietnamese American and she has two moms. Thuy walks home one winter afternoon, angry and lonely after a bully's taunts. Then a bird catches her attention and sets Thuy on an imaginary exploration. What if she could fly away like a bird? What if she could sprint like a deer, or roar like a bear? Mimicking the footprints of each creature in the snow, she makes her way home to the arms of her moms. Together, the three of them imagine beautiful and powerful creatures who always have courage - just like Thuy.

He lived in a pet shop, sharing a bird cage with other cockatiels much like him. However, there was one big difference between Bob and the others: Bob was quite kind and his roommates were not! Being a bit clumsy and not quite as smart, Bob was bullied and made fun of by the other birds. He knew their behavior was wrong-and certainly not polite-and he was determined to find a solution to his predicament. With courage and bravery, Bob stood up for himself by chirping out for help and solving his problem with the aid of his friend.

Julianna didn ' t mean to be a bird. It just happened, feather by feather. " It ' s a rare and beautiful condition, " explains the note her mom sends to school, though it doesn ' t help with the teasing. But Julianna ' s wings take her to places she hadn ' t imagined, with a birds-eye view that gives her a new perspective and the courage to find a flock of her own. Told with kid-friendly humor and heart, this is a unique story about embracing the wild and wonderful parts of ourselves and others.

When Mr. Lincoln, "the coolest principal in the whole world," discovers that Eugene, the school bully, knows a lot about birds, he uses this interest to help Eugene overcome his intolerance.
